

Gender & Sexuality Consultation

I am troubled by scornful speech and behavior in my classes and extracurricular activities.

I've been consulted by a friend, but I'm confused about the best way to help them.

I would like consideration to be given to restrooms, changing rooms, and during health checks.

I want to be called by my preferred name and my self-designated gender.

I'm debating about whether I should come out to my seminar instructor.

You can consult us about problems you're having at the university with regards to gender and sexuality.

Gender and Sexuality Consultation can provide advice on sexual orientation and identity in one's university life.

If you would like to consult us, please come directly to our office (Religion Department) or make a reservation by e-mail. After the date and place have been decided, one of the "Gender and Sexuality Consultation Staff (teaching staff)" will meet with you. Upon receiving permission from the individual, the contents of this consultation will be shared with other counselors, as well as the office, and response will be made as a team. Without the direct consent of the individual, no one other than the counselor will be informed of the consultation contents.

There may be cases in which we are unable to provide the most ideal solution, but let's try together to find a better way together. This service is available for both students and university staff members. Please feel free to contact us.

Gender and Sexuality Consultation is a trial pilot project, implemented by the Human Rights Research Committee.
